Dr. Philip L. Swan

IBM Chief Economist

Phil Swan is the Chief Economist at IBM. He is responsible for developing and interpreting the global economic outlook and its risks, including the implications for the rapidly evolving information technology industry. He assesses the capital investment environment and at a more micro level, he designs and conducts special studies to assess the impact of economic issues and events of importance to the IBM Corporation.

Phil has been at IBM since 1974. Prior to that, he taught at Boston University. He is currently a member of the industry economics panel of the President's Council of Economic Advisors. Phil chairs the business and industry economic policy committee of the international Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). He was recently a member of the U.S. Census Advisory Group representing the American Economic Association. Phil has a Bachelors Degree from Bowdoin College and a Masters Degree and PhD from the University of Illinois.
